

ABSTRACT

Youth unemployment as it concerns national security has been garnering a Significant body of the literature. In the burgeoning literature, the components Youth, unemployment and national security is not adequately assessed and analyzed. This paper is an attempt to describe and analyze the component parts for a better appreciation of youth unemployment on national security issues and challenges. The papers go on to confirm and put in historical perspective that the youth bulge and unemployment are catalysts to national security issues and challenges. The literature review chapter will show theoretically views of different scholars, generated their views due to different projects and observations that show how unemployment comes to reality, also will show empirical literature review that is shown in different research on unemployment in a Tanzania and outside it. The methodology chapter will explain the research design, area of the study specifically in Arusha town, research approach, data types and their sources, sample and sampling technique, data collection methods, data analysis methods, and pilot study. At last, the two last parts will be broken down that adolescent business emergency in sub-Saharan Africa's towns and urban communities is among the locates top advancement needs. High paces of youth under and joblessness make huge impediments to youngsters' capacity to become independent, a vital initial phase in the change to adulthood.

