

ABSTRACT

The insecurity against ship and fisheries are one of the contemporary challenges of the maritime industry. The phenomena have a global impacts on maritime trade and security. Nowadays, the Gulf of Aden and the Indian Ocean are considered high risk areas in terms of piracy and armed robbery against ships. In this regard, both the international community and the coastal States of the region have deployed every effort to try to find ways to address the problem. The effect of Piracy on fishing activity and water transport and how to solve it. The target population is Kibara in Mara in which research will focus on the issues of Piracy on fishing activities and how to solve it. The research will be conducted by interviewing of different security guards and government leader, also it will involve discussion with people in security perspectives and questionnaires by asking question to the security guards and people practicing their activities near Lake Victoria in Kibara areas. The data collected will be classified, and analyzed through SPSS version 16, then to be interpreted using descriptive statistical techniques, and qualitative data will subjected to content analysis. Chart and graph will also be included in analyzing data.

